

Stéphane Lhuillier

Stéphane is Executive Coach and Adjunct Professor at HEC Paris. He is based in Paris.

Stéphane coaches executives and senior management teams in national and multinational organizations to implement strategies in complex and fast changing business environments.

Stéphane has more than twenty years of international business and human resources management experience in business-to-business industries. During his career, he held several positions in business development, general management and group global human resources management.

His competences include managing global organizations in complex and demanding situations, post-merger integration, multi-cultural environments, corporate culture, management and leadership development.

He is Adjunct Professor at HEC Paris where he directs, among others, the international leadership development program "Develop yourself as a Leader". He is also a member of the Executive Committee of the European Human Resources Forum.

Stéphane holds a Master of Sciences in Engineering and a Master of Business Administration from IMD International. He is certified in coaching and team-building, a certified practitioner of Systems Thinking and Transactional Analysis and an experienced practitioner of MBTI and 360°s.

He speaks English and French fluently.